Apple Store Employees' Ability to Track iPhones Not at All Worrisome

A Madison, Wis., thief isn't that familiar with iPhones. A 19-year-old man is accused of stealing two from a display in an Apple store Thursday. Obama Touts Jobs, Roads Agenda

Congress encouraged to approve president's $50B long-term plan

Milwaukee

A combative President Obama rolled out a long-term jobs program Monday that would exceed $50 billion to rebuild roads, railways and runways, and coupled it with a blunt campaign season assault on Republicans for causing Americans' hard economic times.

GOP leaders instantly assailed Obama's proposal as an ineffective one that would simply raise already excessive federal spending. Many congressional Democrats are also likely to be reluctant to boost expenditures and increase federal deficits just weeks before elections that will determine control of Congress.

Jim Manley, spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada, cautioned, "If we are going to get anything done, Republican cooperation, which has been all but nonexistent recently, will be necessary."

That left the plan with low, if not impossible, odds of becoming law this year. When Congress returns from summer recess in mid-September, it is likely to remain in session for only a few weeks before lawmakers return home to campaign for President Obama waves after speaking at the Milwaukee Area Labor Council Laborfest.

Obama Assails Republicans

At a Labor Day speech in Milwaukee, President Obama said Republicans are betting that between now and the Nov. 2 elections, Americans will forget the Republican economic policies that led to the recession. He said they have opposed almost everything he has done to help the economy and have proposed solutions that have only made problems worse.

Mum's the Word

Administration officials wouldn't say what the total cost of the infrastructure projects would be, but did say the initial $50 billion represents a significant percentage. Officials said the White House would consider closing a number of special tax breaks for oil and gas companies to pay for the proposal. Officials said this infrastructure package differs from the stimulus because it's aimed at long-term growth while still focusing on creating jobs in the short term. (AP) re-election.

Administration officials said that even if Congress quickly approved the program, it would not produce jobs until sometime next year. That means the proposal's only pre-election impact may be a political one as the White House tries to demonstrate to voters that it is working to boost the economy and create jobs.

Republicans made clear that Obama should not expect any help from them. Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell of Kentucky said the plan "should be met with justifiable skepticism." He said it would raise taxes while Americans are "still looking for the 'shovel-ready' jobs they were promised more than a year ago" in the $814 billion economic stimulus measure. ‘Little Rock Nine’ Member Dies

As teens, Thomas and others broke Ark. school’s racial barrier

Little Rock, Ark.

Jefferson Thomas, who as a teenager was among nine black students to integrate a Little Rock high school in the nation’s first major battle over school segregation, has died. He was 68.

Thomas died Sunday of pancreatic cancer, according to a statement from Carlotta Walls LaNier, who also enrolled at Central High School in 1957 and is president of the Little Rock Nine Foundation.

Soldiers stood in the school hallways and escorted each of the nine students as they went from classroom to classroom.

Judgeships Hit GOP Wall

Republicans keep president's nominees from filling positions

Washington

A determined Republican stall campaign in the Senate has side-tracked so many of the men and women nominated by President Obama for judgeships that he has put fewer people on the bench than any president since Richard Nixon at a similar point in his first term 40 years ago.

The delaying tactics have proved so successful, despite the Democrats' substantial Senate majority, that fewer than half of Obama's nominees have been confirmed and 102 out of 854 judgeships are vacant.

Forty-seven of those vacan-

President Obama's high-court nominee Elena Kagan, right, was confirmed.

cies have been labeled emergencies by the judiciary because of heavy caseloads.

With Congress returning Sept. 13 for a session shortened by members' desire to campaign for re-election in November, there's little time to reverse the trend. Some say there's little chance of reversing it as polls show a rising chance the GOP will capture the Senate, which could stiffen GOP resistance to confirmation votes.

The Obama administration got a slow start sending names to the Senate last year and has yet to try to fill two vacancies on the high-profile federal appeals court in the District of Columbia.

Obama has voiced only tepid public objection as more of his judicial nominees become stranded in Senate limbo. Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., has been unwilling to set aside the considerable time needed to force votes under complex Senate rules.

There are 45 nominees awaiting action. MARK SHERMAN (AP)

Lawyer Fears Stoning Imminent

Iranian woman was lashed 99 times in separate punishment

Tehran, Iran

The lawyer for an Iranian woman sentenced to be stoned on an adultery conviction said Monday that he and her children are worried the delayed execution could be carried out soon with the end of a moratorium on death sentences for the Muslim holy month of Ramadan.

In an unusual turn in the case, the lawyer also confirmed that Sakineh Mohammadi Ashtiani was lashed 99 times last week in a separate punishment meted out because a British newspaper ran a picture of an unveiled woman mistakenly identified as her. Under Iran's clerical rule, women must cover their hair in public.

With the end of Ramadan this week, the mother of two could be executed "any moment," said her lawyer, Javid Houtan Kian.

The sentence was put on hold in July after an international out-

"The possibility of stoning still exists, any moment," Kian told The Associated Press. "Her stoning sentence was only delayed."

Guatemala's Unrelenting Mudslides Kill 44

Guatemala City

Searchers on Monday pulled more bodies from a mud-covered highway where back-to-back landslides buried bus passengers and people trying to save them. Yet more mudslides helped raise Guatemala's official death toll to 44 after days of torrential rains.

Authorities said 24 people are confirmed dead and at least 16 are believed to be still buried beneath the debris in the village of Nahuala, where a first mudslide buried a bus and other vehicles, then a second one turned would-be rescuers into victims.

At least 20 others died over the weekend elsewhere as a tropical depression saturated the ground and set off more than a dozen landslides around the country, according to the national disaster agency. The most recent slide, on a highway in northern Guatemala, killed

All told, there were 15 landslides at different spots along the Inter-American Highway within in a 48-hour period, a communications minister said. LUIS ANGEL SAS (AP)

Survivors Recount Boat Disaster

Kinshasa, Congo

Survivors who swam to safety after their overcrowded boat capsized over the weekend said nearby fishermen refused to help drowning passengers in the dark of night, instead looting the goods aboard the burning vessel and beating people with oars.

At least 200 people are feared dead from the disaster in southern Congo, one of two deadly boat accidents in as many days that have highlighted the dangers of travel in the country that was ravaged by back-to-back civil wars. Officials say 70 other people died in another weekend accident in the country's northwest.

Lax Safety Rules

In a country with few paved roads, boarding an overcrowded boat on a treacherous river is simply a way of life. Because barely anyone can afford to fly, travelers in Congo ride on boats and barges not intended for people. And there is no such thing as maximum occupancy: Boat operators try to make as much money as they can, overloading the vessels with passengers and cargo. (AP)

Romaine Mishondo, who survived the fiery boat sinking in southern Congo, said late Sunday that the vessel was so crowded it reminded her of "a whole market in the village full of people." The boat had stopped to pick up even more people just 10 minutes before a fire broke out, she said.

As people began jumping overboard, nearby fishermen ignored the passengers' pleas for help.

"Fishermen attacked the boat and started beating passengers with paddles as they were [trying] to loot goods," she said. "The fishermen refused to save passengers, instead taking goods."

Francois Madila, an official from the navigation department in the province, said police arrested two crew members and are investigating the capsizing, which took place near the Central African nation's border with Angola. PATRICE CITERA (AP)

Counting Their Penny-Pinchers

Companies stock up on items that promise to save big dollars

New York

How do you get penny-pinchers to spend these days? Pitch products that promise to save them money. Demand is rising for kitchen and bath gadgets that squeeze out that last blob of toothpaste and help get the suds out of tiny slivers of soap.

“The mood of the country has changed. We’ve had tremendous opportunity with this recession.”

— A.J. KHUBANI, THE MAN BEHIND MANY “AS SEEN ON TV” PRODUCTS.

Marketers of these gizmos tout how the pennies they save by reducing waste can add up. Retailers are stocking up.

During the Great Recession, penny-pinchers got even cheaper, while showing the newly frugal how it’s done. Cheapskate gadgets may be a sign of the times, but they’re also a sign of how product makers and retailers are trying to get people back in the spending habit.

A.J. Khubani, the man behind many “As Seen on TV” gadgets such as the PedEgg foot scraper, is making cheapskate gimmicks a priority at his company Telebrands.

More than half of Telebrands’ gadgets, sold online and at 90,000 stores, are now focused on helping shoppers be cheap. Khubani is speeding up the production rate of products he’s launching from every 60 days to every 30 days.

An open question is whether the truly frugal are too cheap to buy the gadgets that can cost up to $20.

“Surely, people who lived through the Great Depression found ways to use up all their soap without needing a soap saver,” said Lynnae McCoy, who runs the blog

Ways to Save

Here are some of the items stores are stocking up on that they claim will help people save a buck.

- Caps that keep the fizz in opened soda cans.
- Digital day counters: Gizmos that count the days and hours food has been in the refrigerator, to help keep track of when that milk might be in danger of going bad.
- New, stylish versions of pants extenders that let people wear their clothes even after they gain or lose weight.

Beingfrugal.net. Are these products convenient? Some of them, yes. But are they necessary? No. And in some cases, they’re probably a complete waste of money.”

Study: Money — Up to $75K — Buys Happiness

Washington

They say money can’t buy happiness. They’re wrong.

At least up to a point. People’s emotional well-being — happiness — increases along with their income up to about $75,000, researchers report in Tuesday’s edition of Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

For folks making less than that, said Angus Deaton, an economist at Princeton University, “Stuff is so in your face it’s hard to be happy. It interferes with your enjoyment.”

Deaton and Daniel Kahneman reviewed surveys of 450,000 Americans conducted in 2008 and 2009 for the Gallup-Healthways Well-Being Index that included questions on people’s day-to-day happiness and their overall life satisfaction.

Happiness got better as income rose, but the effect leveled out at $75,000, Deaton said. On the other hand, their overall sense of success or well-being continued to rise as their earnings grew beyond that point. (AP)

Secret of Their Succession

N. Korea's first party meeting in 30 years fuels rumors about Kim Jong Il's plans

Seoul, South Korea

Huge posters plastered across the North Korean capital hailed the nation's biggest political convention in 30 years as a historic event as the world watched Monday for signs that the country's next leader was making his public debut.

Party delegates from all corners of North Korea were gathering in Pyongyang, state media said. Thousands practiced waving pink and red plastic flowers in a weekend rehearsal of celebrations at Kim Il Sung Square, China's Xinhua news agency said.

The capital was festooned with posters urging North Koreans to "make this a festive event that will shine in the history of our country and people." One North Korean professor told broadcaster Associated Press Television News the party meeting marked a "turning point" for the communist nation.

However, there was no confirmation Monday that the convention, slated to take place in "early September," had begun, with the timing kept secret as is typical of the North Korean regime.

The gathering is the Workers' Party's first major meeting since the landmark 1980 congress where Kim Jong Il made his public debut as North Korea's future leader. Now 68 and reportedly suffering from diabetes and other ailments, Kim is believed to be grooming his youngest son, Jong Un, to take the Kim North Korean soldiers march in Pyongyang, where a political gathering this week could bring news of who will succeed Kim Jong Il.

High Tension

The conference comes amid tensions with the international community over the North's nuclear program, as well as the deadly March sinking of a South Korean warship. However, the regime said Monday that a seven-member crew of a South Korean fishing boat seized last month in its waters would be released as a humanitarian gesture. (AP)

Backstory

A history of North Korea's leadership:

dynasty into a third generation.

Very little is known about the twentysomething heir apparent said to be his father's favorite among three sons. His name has never been mentioned in state media, and there are no known photos of him as an adult.

There was speculation that Kim Jong Il took the son to China on a recent surprise trip, but there was no mention of Jong Un in dispatches in Chinese or North Korean state media.

Still, South Korea's defense minister said military officials were preparing for any situation that might arise if the succession doesn't go smoothly.

This year's gathering in Pyongyang is not a top-level party congress but a meeting of party representatives that North Korea's state-run Uriminzokkiri web site said is held "when urgent or extraordinary matters arise." (AP)

The Lineage

Not much is known about North Korea's first family, even the age of its presumed new leader.

Kim Il Sung

The late anti-Japanese guerrilla fighter remains North Korea's "eternal president." His April birthday is one of the country's most important holidays.

Kim Jong Il

He holds the title of chairman of the country's National Defense Commission, general secretary of the Workers' Party of Korea and supreme commander of North Korea's military.

Kim Jong Nam

Kim Jong Choi

Kim Jong Un

Kim Jong Un is favored to replace his father as leader even though he is the youngest of three brothers. It's not clear if he was born in 1983 or 1984.

Kim Jong Nam is known for binge spending and has fallen out of favor with his father.

Kim Jong Choi has held a key position on the party's Central Committee. (AP)

Will Rhee Stay or Will She Go?

Schools chancellor's fate tied to results of D.C. mayoral primary

Washington

The scenario is familiar in the District and big cities across the country: An ambitious leader is appointed to reform schools. Policies and practices are upended, five-year plans unveiled, a flurry of initiatives launched with high hopes. After two or three years, political pressure from interests and constituencies unhappy with the changes forces the newcomer out. Enter a successor with a new agenda.

That is what many supporters of D.C. Mayor Adrian M. Fenty and Schools Chancellor Michelle A. Rhee fear will happen if Fenty loses to D.C. Council Chairman Vincent C. Gray in the Sept. 14 Democratic mayoral primary.

Rhee has hinted broadly that she cannot work for Gray, because

“I don’t spend a ton of time thinking about the what-ifs. I’m a much better thinker when it’s ‘Here’s the situation, now what?’” she doubts his resolve to support the unpopular personnel and budget decisions that have marked her tenure. Rhee’s advocates say instability at the top would place at risk encouraging gains in academic achievement, enrollment and teacher quality that have not had a chance to take root.

“It’s really tough to make a dent in one to three years,” said Harvard education professor Thomas Payzant. It’s a measure of the District’s revolving-door history that if Rhee leaves early next year, she will still be the longest-serving schools leader in the last 20 years.

Yet there is reason to believe that if Rhee leaves, the old patterns of churn and change may not play out again in the same way. Major shifts in national education policy, such as the 2002 No Child Left Behind law and President Obama’s Race to the Top grant competition, have created expectations and commitments that will be difficult for any new administration to reverse.

Shanahan-Haynesworth saga continues into ‘Dallas week’

THE REALIGNMENT

The Redskins

Donovan McNabb was practicing again, Albert Haynesworth was still running mostly with the backups, and Brian Orakpo opened practice by yelling: “Dallas week! Y’all know what time it is.”

The Redskins hit regular season mode Monday with as much drama as ever, with tension a bit higher at practice and coach Mike Shanahan ratcheting his game face up a notch or two ahead of Sunday night’s opener against the Dallas Cowboys.

Amid the good news of McNabb was the more complex issue revolving around Haynesworth, the defensive lineman who has been a source of friction for most of the calendar year. Haynesworth was made to play the entire game Thursday in the preseason finale against Arizona when all of the regular starters had the night off — unheard of for a ninth-year veteran who’s twice been an All-Pro — and there remains uncertainty as to his role in the defense.

Defensive coordinator Jim Haslett said Haynesworth took “a few” snaps with the first-stringers Monday and that it doesn’t make a difference who starts because linemen are frequently rotated in and out of the game. Haslett said Haynesworth took snaps at defensive end, nose tackle and played some in the nickel packages.

“He has a much better understanding” of the defense, Has-

‘Ready to Go’

Donovan McNabb was wearing a helmet instead of a baseball cap for the first time since spraining his left ankle in the preseason game against the Ravens on Aug. 21. While he’s lost a lot of valuable practice and playing time getting over the injury, McNabb appears set to make his Redskins debut. “He’s ready to go,” coach Mike Shanahan said. (AP)

lett said. “He’s starting to come around.”

As for any definite word that Haynesworth will even play on Sunday? Don’t look for any enlightenment from coach Mike Shanahan. “He’s one of our players,” the coach said. “We’re going to play the best players who are ready to play.”

Shanahan soon grew tired of questions about Haynesworth, as has happened several times in his sessions with reporters over the past few weeks.

The other players are sick of the talk, too.

“Hopefully, whatever they got going they can go on and iron it out,” cornerback Carlos Rogers said, “where he can go on and get out with us.” JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

A Grand Day for Rookie Espinosa, Nationals

Washington eclipses win total from '08, '09 in rout of Mets

The Nationals

Rookie Danny Espinosa drove in six runs, hitting a grand slam and a solo homer, and getting two other hits and helping the Washington Nationals rout the New York Mets 13-3 Monday for their third-straight victory.

Espinosa, called up from Triple-A on Wednesday, led off the third inning with a home run off

Mike Pelfrey. Espinosa added an RBI single in the fifth, hit a grand slam off Ryota Igarashi in the sixth and doubled in the eighth.

Espinosa has three homers in his last three games.

Washington scored 13 unanswered runs to post its 60th win of the season, eclipsing the Nationals' total from both 2008 and 2009.

Ivan Rodriguez's two-run double ignited a five-run rally in the fourth. Michael Morse hit a tie-

Nats starter Jordan Zimmermann, who is still in the early stages of returning from Tommy John surgery, worked four innings, allowing three runs — one earned — on three hits. (AP)

U.S. Rolls Over Angola, 121-66

Americans finally find championship form in quarterfinal

Basketball

Before it can win a world championship, the United States needed to start looking like a world champion.

Kevin Durant, Chauncey Billups and the rest of the Americans finally had that appearance Monday, powering into the quarterfinals with a 121-66 victory over Angola.

"Obviously, we want to stay humble, but at the same time we have to know that we can do it," forward Kevin Love said. "We know, regardless of what people are saying, that we still are the favorites, and we should play and really act like it, too."

They did, opening the knockout

Russell Westbrook (1) powers toward the basket against Turkey Monday in Istanbul.

round with a quick knockout.

With Billups scoring 16 of his 19 points and Durant all of his 17 in the first half, the Americans saved their most impressive performance in Istanbul for the elimination stage, overwhelming the Angolans from the start after a couple lackluster performances to close the group stage.

"We don't want to be a team that's going to turn it on and off," Durant said. "I think of course we're playing with a little more sense of urgency when you know if you lose, you go home. Guys came out and responded from those last two games." BRIAN MAHONEY (AP)

Park It Right Here

There's no better piece of exercise equipment than a grassy field. It's an invitation to toss a Frisbee, play with your pooch or drop down and give me 20. So when Yards Park (there's a rendering above) opens this weekend — complete with a grassy field, a dog run and a path that's the next segment of the Anacostia River

Walk — the city is invited to celebrate by working up a sweat. Saturday's activities include lawn games, Capital Bikeshare demos, hooping, badminton and bocce, as well as a series of complimentary classes offered by Vida Fitness. (Info at Capitolriverfront.org.)

The park is the first phase and the "centerpiece amenity" of the Yards (Dcyards.com), according to spokesman Gary McManus. Residential units, and office and retail space are expected to grow up around the green area, which will bring more people to the neighborhood to get out and exercise. The developers are also trying to lure vendors who'll rent bikes, roller skates and kayaks to keep fitness front and center. But why wait for the park to get packed? It's an easy bike ride from the Hill or a quick walk from the Metro (Navy Yard stop). That grass is calling for your ass.

Tamara Di Tella, far right, adjusts Lauren Polivka in a demonstration of Tango Pilates at Balance Gym. You can take either private sessions or do it in a duet, like above.

Takes Two to Get Toned

Perform Pilates with a partner to tango music and you have an exercise sensation

Workout

What's new, Buenos Aires? That's what physical therapist/Pilates instructor Lauren Polivka wanted to find out when she visited the Argentine capital last year. She soon stumbled across "Tango Pilates," an exercise method that combines elements of the two disciplines.

Participants perform core-strengthening steps on a square apparatus to tango tunes, which encourage a level of calorie burn you don't typically get from mind-body exercise. But what really hooked Polivka is that, like the dance, it takes two to pull it off. "Working together makes you so much more aware," she says.

And now, she's working with Tamara Di Tella, creator of Tango Pilates, to introduce it at Glover Park's Balance Gym (2121 Wisconsin Ave. NW; 202-965-2121, balancegym.com). Although the method is taught around the globe, Balance is one of the first sites in the U.S. to host the classes. So, Di Tella swung by recently to get the program off on the right foot.

"Inventions are like children. They grow," says Di Tella, who first developed the method in 2004 as a way to rehab Parkinson's patients. Because coordination was a problem, she paired them one-on-one with instructors so they could mirror each action. After reading some of neurologist Oliver Sacks' work on how rhythm could motivate movement, she also experimented with various types of music. "It had to be a strong beat. Salsa wouldn't do. Not New Age. Not cumbia," she says.

But when she played tango, it clicked — both for patients and the general public. It amazes Di Tella that she never thought of the connection between tango and Pilates before, since both require concentration, perfect posture, balance, coordination and movements that flow from the core. "Tango and Pilates are exactly the same except that the tango came first," she adds.

"Tango and Pilates are exactly the same except that the tango came first."

dination and movements that flow from the core. "Tango and Pilates are exactly the same except that the tango came first," she adds.

Inspired by the findings, she invented her own apparatus: a slightly elevated square base that can be adjusted with a variety of accessories, including long poles, arches and elastic bands. And she developed 1,000 exercises to go along with it.

In a typical private session for a fitness enthusiast, the instructor (such as Polivka) starts by standing on the opposite side of the apparatus and stepping up and down on the base. Even this is challenging to mimic because you're wearing socks, which will cause you to slip if you're not engaging your core muscles. She can then segue into step ups combined with kicks, quick side lunges and spins.

The attachments wobble if they're pulled too hard or incorrectly during the movements, so you'll get immediate feedback from the apparatus and the instructor if you need to adjust what you're doing.

There's also a series to do on traditional Pilates equipment, including the reformer. But instead of holding the straps on your own apparatus, you swap. So as you pull the handle toward your head (to pretend to doff your hat), you're actually moving the instructor on her machine, and she's moving you.

"It's a completely new form of exercise," says Polivka, who's offering free demos since you have to experience it to understand it. But anyone who hears the sounds of the bandoneon will immediately want to move, and that's the first step.

Apply Yourself While on the Job

Q I'm so bored in my job. No one cares about what they're doing, and I don't get any meaningful work. I know it's a tough time to be looking now, but I'm thinking of just quitting. The problem is that my parents won't continue to help me out if I do that (they pay some of my college loans and help with my car insurance). They're worried that I will take forever to get a new job. But I think that if I don't have a job, I'll be more motivated in my search. STUCK

I wouldn't be deemed responsible if I encouraged someone to quit a job without having another lined up, especially in this economy (which feels about as strong as my NBA prospects). And the fact that the people who serve as your safety net wouldn't be on board with this plan makes it even more dangerous.

So, why not boost your motivation without shooting yourself in the foot and making your parents angry? Create a reward system for sending out resumes, or set up a bet with one of your friends that puts you out a certain amount of money if you don't do a job search task by a certain date. Make small daily goals and go from there, but do it while still collecting a paycheck.

No More Bar Baby-Sitting

Q Every time I go out with my housemate, she ends up wasted. We're just friends, but it always becomes my job, as the guy, to take care of her. I'm tired of having to cut my night short or miss out on meeting people because they assume we're together. I don't want to come across as selfish, and I know I could just stop going out with her, but we're all in the same circle. INVOLUNTARY BABY SITTER

It sounds like we have two layers of problems here: your friend's drinking, and the logistics of your friend's drinking. No doubt you're being affected by both, but if you truly value the friendship, you'll prioritize the deeper issue here, which is that she needs help.

Sure, emphasize those logistical issues — by explaining how much her drinking affects others and by cutting off the enabling. But with this circle of friends of yours, help her seek out treatment and/or an AA meeting. I can understand your frustration, but the longer you view this as a problem of circumstance rather than a serious mental health issue, the larger a disservice you do your friend — and the more you guarantee the problem will continue.

Blend Bends to Be Better in Bed

Tara Stiles teaches readers to use yoga poses to get slimmer, calmer and sexier

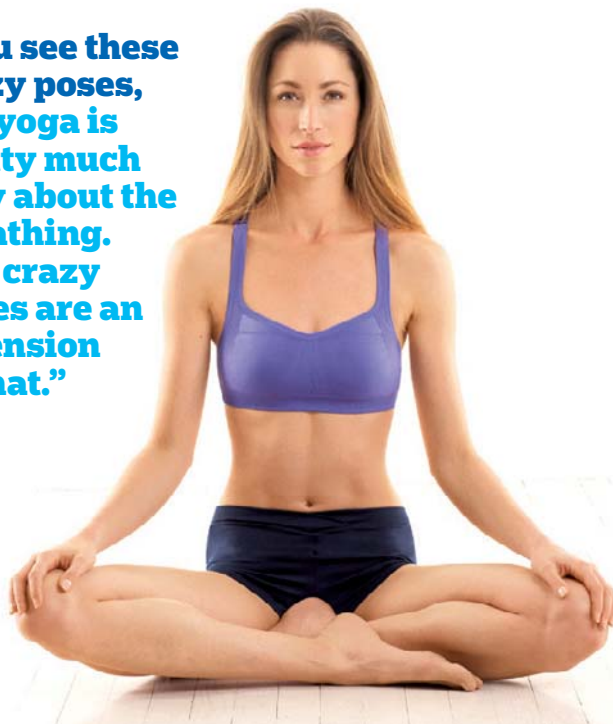

Books

As a kid in rural Illinois, Tara Stiles liked to meditate in trees. So although she's grown up to own Strala, a New York yoga studio, and now serves as Deepak Chopra's personal yoga instructor, she's a firm believer that yoga is something that should be accessible to anyone, anywhere — whether you're on a mat or a branch. Her new book, "Slim Calm Sexy Yoga" ($23.99, Rodale) details the three major benefits of developing a practice and explains how to tap into them in as little as 15 minutes.

What do you hope people will get out of the book?

My greatest hope is that people get excited to do yoga in class or not. This is a choose your own adventure. You can pick what works for you. Maybe you're having trouble sleeping, so you do pigeon pose and meditate. I'm excited to get to show the real-world applications for yoga. My hope is everybody can make yoga a part of their life — you make your coffee and you do your yoga.

"You see these crazy poses, but yoga is pretty much only about the breathing. The crazy poses are an extension of that."

You also have a new DVD, "Yoga Anywhere," which features clips of you in Central Park and on a city sidewalk. Do you ever really do that?

Not by myself a whole lot, but with friends we'll go to the park and do things. It's freeing to know you can practice wherever and whenever you want to. It doesn't have to be stuck in the studio. When I first moved here, my commute was always long, and I was getting frazzled. So, I would see how much I could slow my breath on the subway. It was a game to see how few breaths I could take before my stop.

What's the weirdest place you've ever done yoga?

I guess airports. Everybody goes to the bar for four hours during layovers, but there are routines I do if that happens. I bring my knees to my chest, just do a couple of twists. And I'm not the only one. I think it's intuitive. It feels good, and it's natural.

You emphasize breathing a lot in the book. Why?

You see these crazy poses, but yoga is pretty much only about the breathing. The crazy poses are an extension of that. They become easier the more you focus on the breath.

The "slim" and "calm" parts of yoga are pretty well known. What is it about yoga that's "sexy"?

On a practical level, it makes your relationships better, sex better, and it centers and grounds you. When you're actually having sex, this brings you into the moment. All things are better when you're present. And it makes your body healthier, so things work better.

Any suggestions for convincing your significant other to try the partner poses in your book?

Your partner will be receptive to it if you say this is going to make your sex life better, or you'll be better at your sport. It brings your attention on each other and on yourself. It doesn't need to be a 10-minute routine. You can just say let's do this one pose or let me massage your head. It's more of a conversation starter.

What's your favorite partner move?

I love the corpse pose and all the massage stuff. It feels so good when someone pulls on your neck. It just dissolves all that pressure and you feel so grateful.

Cheers to Your Health

Drinking one or two glasses of alcohol every day might help you live a longer life

Mortality

Here's news you can drink to: Having a glass or two of alcohol a day could actually prolong your life.

That's what researchers from the University of Texas at Austin are saying, after they concluded that moderate drinkers (who drink one to two servings of alcohol a day) are less likely to die an earlier death than both binge drinkers and people who abstain from alcohol entirely.

And while it's not a stretch to believe that drinking responsibly is healthier than pounding five beers every other night, the researchers did report other, more interesting findings. The most surprising one: Heavy drinking might be better for your health than abstaining from alcohol. Which begs the question: Really?

Here are the details: Research over a 20-year period showed that more than 1,000 adults who didn't drink were 49 percent more likely to die — of any cause — than those who drank moderately. This, despite each person's existing health problems, social factors and economic status. (Heavy drinkers also had a 42 percent increase in mortality risk compared with moderate drinkers.)

The study, published in the Aug. 24 online edition of Alcoholism: Clinical and Experimental Research, confirms several prior reports that show that moderate alcohol consumption is associated with a lower risk of death. But the new study has distinct advantages over past studies, says P.K. Shah, director of cardiology at Cedars-Sinai Heart Institute in Los Angeles, including its design, 20-year follow-up and the fact that it adjusted for various factors that could actually influence outcome.

"If you already enjoy one to two drinks a day, there's no reason to stop."

— P.K. SHAH, DIRECTOR OF CARDIOLOGY AT CEDARS-SINAI HEART INSTITUTE IN LOS ANGELES

49%

The increased chances of death — of any cause — that non-drinkers had over moderate drinkers; the study, by the University of Texas at Austin, took place over a 20-year period.

42%

The increased mortality risk for heavy drinkers compared with moderate drinkers.

Shah also says that most research supports the idea that virtually any type of alcohol short of moonshine is beneficial — when used in moderation, that is. But the benefits must also be balanced with risks associated with addiction and toxicity, and their associated hazards.

"If it were completely safe, yes, we would recommend drinking alcohol. But you have to be very cautious in not advocating alcohol as a medication, because there are individuals who are prone to addiction," he says. "For them, recommending alcohol as a way to stay healthy may not be very useful — they could go off the cliff. [But] if you already enjoy one to two drinks a day, there's no reason to stop." Just remember: One drink equals a 12-ounce glass of beer, a 5-ounce glass of wine or a 1.5-ounce glass of 80-proof alcohol. ANDREW DANIELS (REPRINTED WITH PERMISSION OF MEN'S HEALTH © RODALE INC.)

JASON ARTHURS

Chunk of Youth

If I can do anything — anything — in nine years as well as I do it now, with as much energy and passion, I'll be shocked. Aging changes you physically and mentally, and the things you're fervid about in your 20s and 30s might be distant memories — or physical impossibilities — by the time you're in your 40s and 50s.

But Superchunk's first album in nine years, "Majesty Shredding," is actually the band's most complete album since its 1990 self-titled debut and 1991 follow-up, "No Pocky for Kitty." In fact, each of the 11 songs on "Majesty Shredding" has the potential to be an indie-rock "hit," so the record is really on par with the group's untouchable singles collections: "Tossing Seeds: Singles 89-91" and "Incidental Music 1991-95."

Superchunk has long perfected the collision of punk and pop, but one of the reasons "Majesty Shredding" is so indie-rock timeless is that Mac McCaughan's reedy vocals still sound like those of an impassioned 20-something, not the tired pipes of a 43-year-old dad. "Majesty Shredding" comes out Sept. 14, but turn back the clock now: Npr.org is streaming the record this week.

FALL TV PREVIEW

SIX TO SEE

So many shows! So little time! You already have to keep up with your slate of favorite returning shows. Now the networks expect you to carve out more hours to sample their 22 newcomers. What to do? Prioritize, of course. Here are six new fall series that deserve an early look. FRAZIER MOORE (AP)

"Lone Star"

FOX 9/20 A charismatic con man is married to one beautiful woman and shacking up with another, deep in the heart of Texas. Bob (Josh Wolk, below) truly loves them both. He also loves the opportunity this double life affords him to pull scams in two communities — as long as he can keep his two worlds separate.

"Raising Hope"

FOX 9/21 Greg Garcia, creator of "My Name Is Earl," is back with a new brood of lovable losers in this wacked-out dysfunctional-family comedy. Aimless 23-year-old Jimmy (Lucas Neff, above), stumbles on the fact that he's the father of a baby girl. Suddenly, Jimmy has a purpose in life. He persuades his none-too-capable mom and dad that baby Hope is their chance for a parenting do-over.

"Hellcats"

CW 9/8 "Hellcats" is one part youth melodrama, one part "Glee" in skimpy spandex. Gorgeous prelaw student Marti scorns her university's cheerleaders. But suddenly she needs to join the squad, led by feisty Sienna (Ashley Tisdale, below) to keep her all-important scholarship. Scheming rivals and lots of dancing follow!

"Hawaii Five-O"

CBS 9/20 This new version of the 1970s original is a miracle of souped-up, loving restoration. The governor of Hawaii gives Detective Steve McGarrett (Alex O'Loughlin) carte blanche to set up a justice team, which includes kvetching New Jersey transplant Danny "Danno" Williams (Scott Caan, below).

"Running Wilde"

FOX 9/21 "Arrested Development" creator Mitch Hurwitz has paired Will Arnett, below, with Keri Russell as a radiantly comic odd couple. Steve Wilde, the spoiled son of an oil tycoon, wants to reconnect with childhood sweetheart Emmy. But she is now an environmental activist whose tree-hugging zeal clashes with Wilde Oil.

"No Ordinary Family"

ABC 9/28 Michael Chiklis, above, plays a police sketch artist who feels meek both at work and at home. Julie Benz, above, is his brainy wife, and two teenagers complete this not-so-happy family. Then they all gain superpowers. How can they put those remarkable strengths to good use — and make them a unifying family affair?

2 Domestic Art

We've been accused of having a thing for buttons — it's a minor compulsion; we can stop any time we want! — but we're pretty sure "Button Boxes," an exhibit at Cross Mackenzie, will appeal even to those who don't find clothing fasteners fascinating. Elizabeth Kendall's cascading clay pieces find the beauty in entropy. Cross Mackenzie Ceramic Arts, 1054 31st St. NW; through Sept. 14, free; 202-333-7970, Crossmackenzie.com.

3 Remember The Ladies

Simone de Beauvoir was one of many feminist thinkers who were overshadowed by the men in their lives — hey, she and Hannah Arendt could get coffee! — but her seminal book, "The Second Sex," has just been rereleased with a new translation and some previously excised material reinstated. Translators Constance Borde and Sheila Malovany-Chevalier will talk about the new edition tonight. Politics and Prose, 5015 Connecticut Ave. NW; 7 p.m., free; 202-364-1919, Politics-prose.com. Back to School

Relive the awkward years via '90s sitcom 'Boy Meets World'

DVD Review

As a coming-of-age series, "Boy Meets World" (1993-2000, RIP) was basically "Full House" for boys. In addition to protagonist Cory Matthews (Ben Savage), the show was full of male characters: suave best friend Shawn, not-always-so-wise older brother Eric, cool teacher Mr. Turner and stern disciplinarian teacher/principal Mr. Feeny.

The first three seasons, out on DVD this week, bring Cory and Shawn from sixth grade into high school, with all the awkwardness that entails. It's not until the third season that the show settles into itself. Part of that has to do with Savage himself: His voice changes noticeably between seasons 2 and 3, and he finally loses some of the baby face. He gets interested in girls, too.

About those girls: No '90s sitcom character had a more exotic name than Topanga, and Cory's main love interest had the eccentricities to match. Season 3 in particular is full of their relationship starts and stops, as the two figure out what dating means to them instead of just mimicking the relationships around them. Throughout it all, Savage is pitch-perfect in his portrayal of awkward Cory, who's never able to mask his nerves with the coolness that his best friend has in spades.

What's surprising is how quickly the show — and all its actors — faded from memory. Neither Savage nor any of the other mainstays went on to significant other roles. (There is one notable exception: Lee Norris, who played brainy sixth-grader Stuart Minkus, now plays nerdy Mouth on "One Tree Hill.") Still, for that brief moment in time, "Boy Meets World" did one thing very well: It showed that the awkward kid really could turn out OK. CATHERINE LEWIS

FIRST DATE: After more than five years of friendship, they went to a winter formal as just friends and left as more than that.

FIRST KISS: At the formal, during U2's "With or Without You." "We were sharing what felt like a private slow dance, but it was really in the midst of 200 other partygoers," Rick says. "Our friends saw us and snapped a picture."

HOW HE PROPOSED: At home, before what Jessica thought was a low-key date. "We kissed and hugged, and I screamed and jumped for joy. Finally, I began to calm down and said, 'So, we aren't going to see 'The Hangover'?" They went to Restaurant Eve instead.

PET NAMES: From his kickball days he's "Rickball," so she's "Jessball."

FIRST DATE: Dinner at Amphora in Vienna, Va.

HOW HE PROPOSED: "He dropped hints that he got me an awesome Christmas gift, and two days before Christmas gave me ... a hat," Alice says. "She was totally thrown off the scent," Josh says. On Christmas morning, he asked her to be his wife.

PET NAMES: She's "Stinky," and he's "Smelly."

WITH INFINITE FUNDS: Metallica would play at the reception, and the New Orleans Saints would give a toast. "Then we'd fly everyone to New Orleans for beignets," Josh says.

Horoscope

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Adjustments may have to be made to account for someone else's lack of discipline or consideration. Focus on what you can do, not on what can't be done.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) A screening of sorts may be required before you can decide just who should and should not be a part of your central team when the time comes to start a new project.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) The day begins on a note of uncertainty, but you can do much to improve your odds — and assist others as well. By day's end, anything negative is forgotten.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You will want to remember exactly what has been asked of you and what is expected — and the two may not be quite the same. Read between the lines.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Your attraction to something — or someone — rather dangerous changes the tone of the day and brings you into contact with elements that you might have otherwise avoided.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You're approaching a crossroads of sorts, but while others might find that daunting, you are excited by the prospect of making a decision that really matters to you.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Any approach that allows you to be direct without being offensive is the correct approach. Outside those parameters lies a hazard that is best avoided.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You can carry on as if nothing has happened, even in the wake of a negative personal development. At some point, however, you must allow yourself room to react.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Others are waiting for you to act on a decision you may have made some time ago, but you're probably still having second thoughts. Now is the time to examine your true desires.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Your focus should be on the people you have the opportunity of serving, not on the amount of effort it will take. The more generous you can be, the better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) That which doesn't come naturally can be learned, and you'll have the chance to learn a thing or two about a topic you've only had the slightest inkling of — and that only rarely.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You don't want to get bogged down in questions of right and wrong; stick to the facts, and do those things that you know are required of you without passing judgment.

This treatment study is studying if a research medication can produce a rapid reduction of depressive symptoms in patients with treatment-resistant major depressive disorder.

This 7-week inpatient study is conducted at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, Maryland, and compares the medication to a placebo (inactive salt solution). After completion of the study the participant will receive short-term treatment to transition back to the community. In addition, all research participation is without cost.

- Those eligible to participate must:
- Be ages 18-65
 - Have been diagnosed with major depression
 - Have taken two antidepressants that did not help
